

Privacy policy

The Court of cassation takes privacy seriously and we are committed to protecting it.

This policy explains when and why we collect personal information about you, how this information is used, the conditions under which it may be disclosed to others and how it is kept secure. This policy may change from time to time so please check this page occasionally to ensure that you're happy with any changes.

Unfortunately, the transmission of information via the internet is not completely secure. Although we will do our best to protect your personal information, we cannot guarantee the security of your information transmitted to our website and any transmission is at your own risk. Once we have received your personal information, we put in place reasonable and appropriate controls to ensure that it remains secure against accidental or unlawful destruction, loss, alteration, or unauthorised access.

COOKIES

What are cookies?

Cookies are small unique text files stored on your computer or device while you're visiting a website. Cookies help make websites work. They also provide us with information about how users interact with our website.

Some cookies remain on your device only for as long as you keep your browser active (session cookies) and others remain for a longer period (persistent). Cookies may be placed by us when you visit our website, or by third parties.

Why we use cookies

The Court use cookies on our website to:

- provide necessary functionality
- understand how users navigate around our website
- try to improve your experience on our website (including remembering settings you have chosen previously)
- show you more relevant content

Setting your cookie preferences

Some of the cookies we set are needed to make our website work (necessary cookies). If you're unhappy with these you may be able to disable them using your browser settings but our website may not work correctly.

This website uses cookies to provide essential functionality, to help us understand how people find and use the website www.courdecassation.fr, to personalise your experience, and tailor advertising to you. You can accept our recommended settings by clicking "I Accept", or manage which categories of cookies you allow below.

We need your consent to use non-essential cookies. When you first visit our website, you'll see a cookie banner giving you the option to accept our recommended cookie settings or offering you more control. A consent cookie will be placed on your browser to remember your choice.

Cookies used on this site

These cookies allow the website to run optimally. Although the user experience might be lessened, you can disable or erase them using your web browser.
